Hi Kelly,
I spoke to Lorre this morning about [redacted]. She was not aware that they were scheduled for sexual history tests next week. I forgot to notify her. As a result, she has not had the opportunity to review their histories with them. They both just had maintenance tests in April. Looks like we will have to postpone those tests until I can make it back out there. Does that sound alright?

Hey Dan, any idea what day you'll be coming back around these parts? When we last spoke in August you thought you might be back around October. Just want to not only make sure I'm here on that date, but also give my people a heads up on when they need to have the $250.00 since now they have to pay for it themselves. Thanks. To my knowledge, will be resolving his failed poly with you in Flagstaff on the 16th of this month...but we have failed poly to resolve and if Lorre feels that re ready...we will have 2 Instant Offense polys as well.

If Lorre doesn't feel the last 2 are ready, then we only have failed poly to resolve. It's an awful long way to come for 1 poly so however you want to handle that one I'm fine with. (i.e., wait until a later date...have him go to LHC...etc.)

Hey Dan, is it possible for you to perform the polygraphs but not get paid the same day? La Paz County will be paying for the defendant's tests now but I can't really get a check to you ahead of time because we can't know for sure if everyone will show up or not. If you submitted an invoice the same day that you did them, I believe the turnaround time is a couple weeks...at the very worst it is net 30 but I seem to recall the treatment provider submitting an invoice and getting paid in a couple weeks. Let me know if this is a problem for you and I'll see what my options are. Thanks.

Also...Big issue with he was not allowed a privilege that he requested (because of the failure) and he went off in a 3 page text to me about the polygraph being "unfair because we knew he was sick and was trying not to cough" and that we "hold too much to a polygraph" and that he doesn't care about "any polygraph"....

Maybe I'm reading too much into it...but I'm worried it may be the doctor's philosophies rubbing off on him...

Crap...there is no sex offender treatment on the 14th...

I guess we'll just have to keep the meeting through e-mails and phone calls. He knows my philosophy on polygraphs...that they are not necessarily the "word from above"...but they are an accurate tool that probation stands behind. I further told him that I would not use a polygraph to violate a defendant (unless they were currently committing new offenses) but they are used to better supervise and that it seems only natural that a polygraph would help the Treatment provider to better "treat" the defendant.

I guess I'm just hoping that he will be up front with you about what his reservations are so that you are able to explain the process. But I did tell him that I would be contacting you and giving you his number and email so that the two of you could "meet" and get to know each other and that you could explain how the polys are done now a days and in particular, with sex offenders.

If you have any questions or concerns please let me know. Thanks.

Hi Dan,

Wanted to give you a heads up with [redacted] He began taking new medication approximately 2 weeks ago...Sertraline and Gabapentin. He will have been taking these new meds for basically a month when it's time for the polygraph but I'm not sure if that's enough time so I will wait to hear from you.

As for the therapist...I hope you have had a chance to talk/email with him. I'm not thrilled with his views of polygraphs but he is not used to working with them so I'm hoping you can show him that the views he has are false and very outdated. We do have a contract with him that I feel we will need to honor until it is up (can't remember if it was a 1 or 2 year contract) so if we can try to clue him in on what really happens I think that is a better idea than bringing in a new therapist. However, if after talking with him he still feels the same way and those beliefs are being transferred to the defendants...then yes, we will need to talk new therapist.

He will be here on the same Friday that you will be here. He normally does not show up until 3:30 or so (he drives from Phx and group starts at 4)...but I will see if maybe he can come a little earlier so that when you are done with the last poly (which should be around 3) maybe you can introduce yourself and briefly show him what you did. Will you have a little time after the last poly of the day?

offender to really search his mind and maybe remember things that he might not otherwise, but by thinking about the "taking of a naked picture" it jogged his memory of when he sent a naked photo to an underage kid or something...he didn't agree. He also firmly believes that if they have to take the sexual history polygraph...it should be done prior to the instant offense poly (if they deny the offense). I even gave him the handout from Ben Galarneau who just presented at the sex offender training that you did last year for AOC....he still thinks he's right and everyone else is wrong.

I told him I would be giving you his email address and phone number because I am hoping that you two can connect on some level and maybe you can assuage him of all his fears and distrusts of polygraphs. For sex offender therapy to work, I believe we all need to be on the same page promoting the same philosophies to the offender (even if that's not how we really feel). I don't want the offender playing us against each other. However, this is the only therapist we have...it's not like we can go therapist shopping for one who buys into what we are trying to do. HELP!!!!!!

Hi Kelly,

The sexual history packet should be distributed and reviewed with the client by the treatment provider. The sex history and instant offense tests are both primarily for treatment to break denial. If a client fully admits to the details of his instant offense, then he can be progressed into a sex history test without doing an instant offense test. If the client denies his instant offense, then we need to do an instant offense test before we move to a sex history. What I recommend, is making sure we have a maintenance test at least once a year (preferably every 6 months) and then fitting the treatment tests somewhere in between without going over a year without a maintenance test. would be fine to do an instant on if they are denying their offense and if they are in treatment. There is not much sense running an instant offense if they are not in treatment. At some point, eeds to admit to his instant offense. I know that West Winds will discharge them from treatment if they don't eventually fess up, but that is up to the treatment provider on how they handle it. The next test for should be a maintenance.

I hope that helps. Let me know if you have any other questions.

Thanks

Hey Dan,

I was wondering who gives the sexual history packet to the defendants...you, me or the treatment provider? It was just brought to my attention that those who have been in treatment for 6-8 months should be getting ready to take their sexually history polygraph. Well my guys have been in treatment since July 2013...but 2 of them still haven't taken the instant offense polygraph.

Should we change _____ and _____ to instant offense polys instead of maintenance? _____ offense occurred quite some time ago but he has never taken an instant offense poly....and _____ as been on less than a year.

Also, I was told that there is no point in taking the sexual history poly if there are issues with the instant offense poly...so does that mean _____ ever takes a sexual history poly? He has told me (which could change over time I know) that he will "never change my story".

Anyway, any info you can give me is very helpful and I will see you Valentine's Day. 😊

LOL...yes I got married. Thank you.

And nothing says "LOVE" like a polygraph, right? LOL...2/14/14 sounds good to me. I'll let the guys know.

Thanks,
Kelly

Hi Kelly,
I have get used to seeing your new name! I assume that that means you got married. Congratulations! How about we do all three of the tests on Feb 14th at your office in Parker? We can do times of 9, 11, and 1. Will that work? I know that is Valentines Day, but we should be done by about 3.

Hey Dan,

Hope your holidays were good.

Any word on a date yet? I've told them all early February but it's hard to make plans for the unknown. Also, is back so there will now be 3 tests...all maintenance. Keep me posted please. :)

Hi Kelly

I am coming to Lake Havasu in early February. I should have open slots to get your two guys in. Let me finalize my schedule and get back with you. As far as [redacted] he needs a maintenance in February. It should be up to his treatment provider to determine when he needs another instant offense as that test is solely a treatment test. What did they say after the last test? Has he made an progress? There is no need to test him on the same issue unless he admits to what he did. As far as I am concerned, he failed a specific issue on touching his bio daughter. He needs to explain the responses on the test before I give him another test on the same issue.

Hi Dan,

It's that time of the year again...I need to schedule polygraphs. Unfortunately, due to new crimes and other violations...I only have 2. I will need Maintenance polys for [redacted] and [redacted]. [redacted] has been modified to once a year polys so he will not need another one til July 2014.

As for [redacted] ast poly (Instant Offense) that he failed...when do we reschedule that? I know I have to get the Maintenance one in there prior to a year passing from his last one....so do we just schedule another Instant Offense poly around late March or early April? I left a message on Susan's phone asking for assistance. I'm not sure if I need to keep testing him every few months until he passes since it's the Instant Offense poly. I know we do when it's a Maintenance/Monitoring poly because we need to know if they're harming anyone or if they're complying...but this poly only hinders his completion of treatment.

Anyway, get back to me when you can on how you'd like to proceed. Since there's only 2...maybe we can meet you up in LHC if that's easier for you.
