Just realized that I never responded to this....I'm so sorry. Those dates and times work for me. We may have an additional guy for an Instant Offense polygraph. He's a repeat offender so you may remember him, he is supposed to be sentenced on 5/14. I spoke with him last week and he is denying his offense so even though it would be kinda quick into his treatment...since you are here, Lorre may want an Instant Offense poly rather than wait until you're back in January/February of the next year...

Hi Kelly,
How about we plan for June 14 and 15 for these tests? We can plan for 5 tests with three of them on the 14th. Times of 9, 11, and 2. And two of them on the 15th with times of 9 and 11. Will that work? I am going to plan for me to come and do them...so get your lunch spot figured out!

Then we had people who did not take the test that will need one:

And I will have a new guy as of 4/9 so he may need one too...a baseline or maybe instant offense if he's not up front with Lorre:

Hi Kelly,

Interesting....I am also a pessimist when it comes to situations like this. We test people who have epilepsy all the time...as long as they are on their medication, it should not be a problem. Maybe his medication dosage has not been perfected yet because it is a new diagnosis? My suggestion would be to direct him to take his medication as prescribed and schedule him for the next round of testing.

Subject: polygraph question

Hi Dan. I would like to have your opinion on something. Where Eric was here last a couple weeks ago was not able to be tested because he appeared to be having a medical issue. He was shaking uncontrollably. He was diagnosed with epilepsy a month or so ago and maybe he really was having some sort of epileptic seizure or something that was causing his shaking. From a non-doctor's perspective....it did not look real and as soon as he and I went outside to get his cigarettes while he waited for his sister to come pick him up, he did not even appear to have a shaking issue.

The pessimist in me thinks he was faking it to get out of a polygraph, however, I am not a doctor and maybe there really was an issue...which means he will not be able to be tested anymore...

Is epilepsy a legit reason that he will never be able to be tested? Should I reschedule him as some point or is it pointless?
Thanks for your input.

Hey Dan...long time no talk.

Do you have any available time slots to come here and do some maintenance polygraphs around late January or early February? I'm thinking there would be 7...possibly 8 to do.

I've got 2 people that have never had a maintenance polygraph; 3 that last had one done March 2, 2017; and 2 that last had one done on June 27, 2017, but one of them was who was deceptive and the other is who resolved his previous failed polygraph.

The possible 8th person is a new guy that you will be doing a polygraph on for Mohave County in a week or so. He recently moved to La Paz County but is keeping his schedule poly that Mohave set up. His name is If he has a failed or inconclusive test he will need to resolve it at that time.

That's a lot of tests so I wanted to try to coordinate something with you since holidays are coming up and all. Please let me know what works best for you. Thanks. 😊

I just got a new sex offender transferred in....it will likely be too soon for a Maintenance on him, however, if he starts treatment and denies his offense Lorre may want an Instant Offense done. It's just too early to know for sure.

He has a hearing before the Court in Kingman on 3/21 to determine if he should have sex offender conditions and I feel his poly results may swing the pendulum in probation's favor since it's completely discretionary. FYI.. was admitted to the hospital last night due to his heart not pumping enough blood. He's been released today and needs to schedule an appointment with his cardiologist...but this may interfere with his upcoming polygraph. I have him scheduled for the very first one (3/2/17 @ 0900) so if it turns out he cannot take the poly, I'll give you a heads up and you can take your time getting here. Lol

Sure.

Has Lorre talked with you yet about

I also have concerns about the type of polygraph to give one of my clients. You did a maintenance on him in January 2016. He denied that he was going into women's bathrooms for a sexual purpose for an entire year, but just recently admitted to going on websites where he can view women urinating (who don't know they're being taped) and has fantasies of raping them. Do we need a monitoring poly for him or still just a maintenance?

I know we've been talking about when to get polygraph (resolution) in, and we have the remaining group needing theirs around September, but we have a new guy. He just transferred in from CA and Lorre did her intake with him on 7/11/16. She did not allow him to join the group that day because she wants him to undergo a polygraph first. If she has not talked with you already about it, maybe give her a call because I am not sure what type of poly she wants him to have and he cannot wait until September to being treatment. Please get back to me with any questions. Thanks.

Also, even though I really enjoy your company...I'm wondering if you should maybe send one of your employees this time since we've used you for every polygraph since January 2013. I'm fairly certain there is something written somewhere that says you should mix it up every once in a while and not use the same polygrapher for every test year after year. What are your thoughts? Whatever works for you. I will have her baby early November...the 8th I believe...so however much time she needs to recover so she can take the poly is the only issue on my end.

Let me look at the schedule and see what I can do. I should start to catch up from my injury in November, so maybe early December?

Thanks Dan. Any idea on when you will be able to make it back down for _____ and _____ ; Sexual History polygraph? I will also have a maintenance polygraph for a new guy and I also have a new girl that is in Sex Offender Treatment and may need a poly but that will depend on if Lorre needs it...we haven't discussed it yet.

Hey Dan,

Just checking to see if doctor note allowing him to take the polygraph is sufficient for you...and if so, what time is his polygraph? I still have you down for the federal polys at 1 & 4.

It depends on the delivery. If she is feeling ok, maybe as soon as two-three weeks after her delivery. There is not set amount of time.

LOL...aw yes, priorities (lunch).

As for [redacted] I think both Lorre and I were counting on her polygraph as a big determining factor on whether or not she will be allowed to have unsupervised contact with her child....so that kinda bites. How soon after delivery would she be able to take the test? Does she have to wait a few weeks, etc.?

Ok sound good. As for [redacted] first off...I hope she is ok! Secondly, it doesn't matter if she is high risk pregnant or just pregnant. I won't test a pregnant person. Lastly, start thinking about where we are going for lunch!
Thanks☺

Hey Dan,

... stated he has a letter from his doctor that reads: "Patient may engage in non-exertional activities to include polygraph." So if you would like to schedule him for the 18th he will be ready.

As for ... she was in a car accident last Thursday and I'm guessing will not be participating in the polygraph on the 18th. I still have no proof from a doctor that she is a "high-risk" pregnancy, that she has been ordered on bed rest, or that she was actually in a car accident for that matter...but it's probably safer to not schedule her at this time.

Hi Kelly,

We won't be able to polygraph ... until after her pregnancy. Let me know about ... He should have a note from his doctor that he is able to have stress from a polygraph.
Thanks!

Hey Dan,

We may have a problem with the upcoming polygraph date. ... is having problems with her pregnancy and the doctor has put her on medication to stop her from having contractions. She is only 5 months along and dilated to 4. She is not on bed rest, however she has been advised that she is to take it easy. I will know for sure on Monday what the medication is called.

Also, ... had Angioplasty a couple days ago and I'm not sure how that will affect a polygraph either. I will find out on Monday if he is taking new heart medication and will let you know.

As of today's date, both claim they are able to attend sex offender treatment on Monday so I will talk with them more on that date. I texted Lorre to call me at her convenience so I could update her on their conditions but she hasn't called yet.

I also need to do two Fed tests if that is ok? It would be best to do the sex history tests at 11 and 3. And maybe the fed tests at 9 and 1:30. Does that work?
