UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (WJAC) — University police say a former Penn State student is facing child pornography charges.

According to a criminal complaint, the Federal Bureau of Investigation served a search warrant June 4, 2020 at Atherton Hall, a dormitory-style residency hall on the Penn State University campus.

Authorities say the investigation involved now 21-year-old Terry Faber although he was not living at the dorm at the time due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Police say the devices contained multiple files depicting child pornography.

They say they began investigating Faber after he underwent a polygraph test as part of an internship with a federal agency.

They say Faber admitted during the test that he had searched and downloaded child porn from the dark web.
